

Green T Organic & Bamboo Clothing

When artists Ellen Ferrin and Sandra Negron first met, they instantly clicked, especially when it came to creating beautiful, earth-friendly designs. Working together in the textiles industry earned them props in design and production, so when they conceived the idea of combining their artistic passions with 100% organic materials, they ran with it.

An American archetype, the t-shirt has evolved into a personal billboard for social messaging—advertising, political thought, fashion and personal expression—but Ellen and Sandra thought the simple T could be much more, a walking canvas to spark visual conversation. Their drawings and paintings provided the raw materials for their designs, which incorporate funky, naturalistic elements with their own brand of humor.

Green T's earth-friendly t-shirts are made of 100% organic cotton produced using methods with a low environmental impact, as defined by the Global Organic Textile Standards. Grown in healthy, crop-rotated soil, Green T's fabric is free of the pesticides and fertilizers used in conventionally-produced fabrics. Their water-based inks are also free of the toxic chemicals commonly found in pigments. Green T's clothing is not only visually exciting— it celebrates the spirit of ecology and stresses the importance of reducing our carbon footprint.

By marketing quality, earth-conscious merchandise on the Internet and in mom-and-pop retailers nationwide, Green T will support small businesses in their competition with large corporate retailers. Future plans include incorporating their designs into organic home textiles and expanding production into struggling global communities.
